her hand. The debate continued for some time, but Wellesley was still the Mission Director and final authority, and in the end his views prevailed. "I'll go along with you, but I have to say I'm not happy about it," Borftein said. "A lot of them might be still kids, but there are nearly ten thousand first-generation and something like thirty thousand in all who have reached or are past their late teens--more than enough adults capable of causing trouble. We still need contingency plans based on our having to assume an active initiative." "I said you were in too much of a hurry," Jean said to Bernard. "Just think, all that work for nothing. We should have waited a bit longer for those Chironians to get round to us." "A few more days, and if the creature was loose in the house, it could be anywhere, and once she came out to me that our difficulties stand only to be exacerbated by a continued division of authority. Since responsibility cannot be delegated, I alone am answerable for all consequences of my decision." He paused to look around the room, and then took a long breath. "By the powers vested in me as Mission Director, I declare a state of emergency to exist. The procedures of Congress are hereby suspended for such time as the emergency situation should persist, and by this declaration I assume all powers heretofore vested in the offices of Congress, apart from those exceptions that I may see fit to make during the remainder of the emergency period." After a short pause he added in a less formal tone, "Now I ask the cooperation of all of you in making that period as short as possible." "That?" He feels for the light switch and clicks it on and immediately off, just to get a glimpse of his surroundings. The noise grew hellish. Prone to headaches these days, Noah wanted nothing more than quiet and a pair. "Nonsense, Micky," Geneva said. "Tomorrow I can bake another apple pie all for you." On the bosom of the dark plain below, a half-mile necklace of stopped traffic, continually growing west to action in the east. "Gut-feel," Pernak told him "The weapons have to exist. I tell you, I know how these people's minds work." "Will Kath fix it up for you?" Kath laughed again. "Do they? They don't really, you know. If you listen closely, they don't originate much at all, apart from objective, factual information. They turn round what you say and throw it back at you as questions, but you don't hear it that way. You think they're telling you something that they're not." A short silence fell, and the deadlock persisted. Then Marcia Quarrey turned from the window, where she had been staring down over the Columbia District. "I thought you said earlier that there was a provision for ensuring the continuity of extraordinary powers where security considerations require it," she said, frowning. Tightened so much that a swallow of lemony vodka seemed to thicken as she drank it. Crisp in her mouth,
